

INSIGHTS

Into The Weekly Parsha

MARCH 21, 2026 This week's Insights is dedicated in loving memory of Raizel bas Ephraim, Teresa Zukerman. "May her Neshama have an Aliya!"

VOLUME 16, ISSUE 23

3 NISSAN

Based on the Torah of our Rosh HaYeshiva HaRav Yochanan Zweig

PARSHAS VAYIKRA

An Offer You Can't Refuse

If you offer a meal offering of your first fruits to the Lord [...] (2:14).

The third sefer of the Torah introduces the concept of korbonos – different types of offerings brought in the newly built Mishkan. One of these oblations was the omer offering brought from the newly harvested crop of barley. As Rashi (ad loc) points out, "Although the Torah uses the word "im" (which generally means if), in this instance it means when." After all, bringing the korban omer is obligatory, not optional.

This isn't the first instance of "im" being obligatory. In fact, Rashi in Parshas Yisro (20:22) quotes the Midrash: "R' Yishmael says, 'Everywhere in the Torah the word "im" is used to refer to an optional act (i.e. an act one may choose to do or not to do) except for three places in the Torah.'" The first occurrence is in Parshas Yisro when the Torah states "im" you will build an altar of stone. The second one is in Parshas Mishpatim (22:24) when the Torah states "im" you will lend money, and the third occurrence is here in this week's parsha. As Rashi points out, none of these mitzvos are optional. Bnei Yisroel were commanded to build an altar, to lend money to those in need, and to bring the korban omer.

This Midrash is difficult to understand. If the Torah meant to convey that these three mitzvos are actually obligatory, why should the Torah use a word that implies that they are optional? As the Midrash itself states, throughout the Torah the word "im" indicates a discretionary act, but here it refers to an obligatory act. Why? For what reason would the Torah use a word that implies the opposite of its common usage? Furthermore, why does it appear specifically by these three mitzvos? What is unique about these three?

These three mitzvos represent Torah, avodah (worship), and gemillus chassadim (acts of kindness) – and the Mishna in Pirkei Avos (1:2) proclaims that they are the three pillars on which the world is perched. The reason that they are so critical to the existence of the world is that they represent the three relationships that every person must develop. Avodah represents man's relationship with his Creator; chessed represents man's relationship with his fellow man; Torah represents man's relationship with himself (the Torah represents one's personal growth from a "rational animal" to a man of elevated spiritual status).

When dealing with relationships, one has to convey to the other party that this is what one wants to do, not what one has to do. The Torah isn't trying to convey anything about the obligatory status of these mitzvos. The Torah uses the word "im" to teach us about our attitude in performing these mitzvos. We must perform these mitzvos as if our participation is optional and not obligatory.

Miami Edition

Take, for example, the obligation of lending money. If someone in dire need comes to us for help, we must make them feel as if we are helping them because we want to, because we care about them – not because the Torah obligates us to help them. So too with avodah; we need to show that we want to serve Hashem as if it's our greatest privilege to honor and do so – not act as if we were forced and are simply performing out of obligation.

In this week's parsha the Torah discusses bringing the omer offering. The Chinuch (ad loc) explains that we bring this barley offering (which is considered animal feed) on the second day of Pesach when we begin to count up to Shavuot, when we received the Torah. Then, on Shavuot, we bring a wheat flour offering (considered the food of people). The fifty days in between represent the change we must make within ourselves, and the effect that Torah has on us – we must discover ourselves through Torah study and thereby transform ourselves to an elevated status. This transformation achieves a healthy self-image and perfected relationship with oneself.

Partners for Life

This week we read Parshas Hachodesh, the last of the four parshios that were instituted to be read on Shabbos in the weeks prior to Pesach. Parshas Hachodesh discusses the mitzvah of blessing the new moon – Kiddush Hachodesh. Moshe was instructed to set the Jewish calendar by the new moon and to regard Nissan as the head of all the months of the year. Hashem even showed Moshe exactly the standard by which the new moon is to be identified and gave him the exact calculation of a lunar month (29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes, 3 and 1/3 seconds).

This mitzvah holds a special significance as it was the first one given to the Jewish people as a nation. In fact, the very first Rashi at the beginning of the Torah points out that the Torah should have logically begun with this very mitzvah instead of the story of creation. Maharal explains Rashi's rationale: The Torah is a book of mitzvos. For this reason, Rashi questions that perhaps it would be more sensible for the Torah to begin with the first mitzvah given to Bnei Yisroel.

Still, this assertion seems odd for a few reasons. Based on the assumption that the Torah is a book of mitzvos; wouldn't it be more logical for the Torah to begin with the mass revelation at Sinai, when the entire Jewish people received Hashem's commandments? The Torah could have begun with the Ten Commandments, which encapsulate all of the 613 mitzvos, and then filled in the remaining information afterward.

This would seem to be far more appropriate than beginning with a revelation experienced by two individuals (Moshe and Aharon). After all, every religion in the world is based on a supposed "revelation" experienced by a single individual or a small group of people. The very foundation of our knowledge of the Torah's truth, on the other hand, is based on the fact that the Giving of the Torah was witnessed by millions of people. Following Maharal's explanation of Rashi's reasoning, it would be much more logical to begin the Torah with the story of the revelation at Mount Sinai. So what does Rashi mean that the Torah should have begun with this mitzvah?

The answer lies in understanding what the significance of this mitzvah is and why Hashem chose it to be the first one given to the newly formed nation of Bnei Yisroel.

In fact, the mitzvah of Kiddush Hachodesh, that of establishing the new month, really goes far beyond merely establishing a Jewish calendar. This mitzvah establishes Hashem's intention for Bnei Yisroel to be His partners in running the world. The mitzvah of Kiddush Hachodesh is the very definition of the relationship between Hashem and the Jewish people.

Hashem created the world and everything in it, but the management of this world, and Hashem's interaction with it, is in the control of the Jewish people. Giving the Jewish people the power (and responsibility) to establish the calendar and to determine when each month begins means that we have control over time.

In other words, if we decide that today is Rosh Chodesh, Yom Kippur falls out on one day. If we determine that tomorrow is Rosh Chodesh, Yom Kippur falls out on different day.

This is incredibly significant. In essence, we are the arbiters of how and when Hashem interacts with the world because we hold the power over time. We can actually imbue days with holiness based on our decisions. This is a profound statement of the trust Hashem has in the Jewish people, and defines the depth of our relationship with Him.

This is why it was the first mitzvah given to the Jewish nation – it defines their role within creation and the role Hashem expects us to play within His divine plan for the world. It is for this reason that Rashi suggests that the Torah should have begun with the section of the Torah known as Parshas Hachodesh.

Time to Sell Your Chometz!

With Pesach quickly approaching, it's time to sell your Chometz.

Talmudic University makes it simple: Just follow the link and we'll sell it for you on April 1st!*

*March 31st for those who will be out of the country

Visit:

sellyourchometz.online

4000 Alton Road
Miami Beach, FL 33140

To dedicate an issue of Insights please email:
info@talmudicu.edu
or contact us at: (305) 534-7050

Scan to subscribe and receive Insights via email